Half Asleep in Frog Pajamas

"My current holiday book escape involves death, sex, and money. It's a humorous adventure that takes place during the first recession in the '90s. So hard to explain, but it does involve money, cancer and mind blowing sex." -

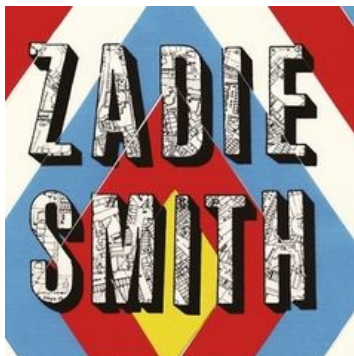

The Painter by Steve Heller - Chip Fisher

"It's the sequel to the Pulitzer Prize winning book Angela's Ashes. It's the tale of Frank's rise from impoverished immigrant to a beloved teacher and brilliant writer in a New York City. Frank's words are gritty, brutally honest, poetic, and real. He writes the way I feel. I've read this book so many times, I've lost count." - Christine Pineiro

"A fast paced slick black comedy of a book about the art scene and a plan to capitalize on all its pretensions." - Lynn Lobash (NYPL)

"For me, it's gotta be East of Eden by John Steinbeck. Death, Sex and Money abound in this book. It was my first listen on Audible and now I am completely hooked on the app. I finished the book in no time!" - Austin Sherman

"A wild book where the premise is there are among us people who are born, live, die and then are reborn into the same life they just lived with all the memories of their previous lives. The book opens with a bang: The world is ending sooner than it should, and it's up to the titled protagonist to find out why. I think it meets all the criteria... it opens with sex, the character dies at least 15 times and money... well, it's what makes their world go around." - Andy Sauer

"I think one of the recent books from my book club would be a great book for DSM listeners. Not only does it really meet all the death-sex-money criteria, but it is a true and amazing story written by Leymah Gbowee about how she and other women in Liberia stood up and played a huge role in ending the war there in the early 2000s." - Charity Meakes

"At first you think you have read this story a hundred times -- a culmination of all the New Yorker and New York magazine profiles on the tech industry and San Francisco. But this telling will make you shut down your Instagram account." - Lynn Lobash (NYPL)

"Another satire, antihero Bill Nye is an unhinged ad exec who sees his life of carte blanche 'Mad Men' style excess derailed by an intern. 'Intern' as he calls her, proves infuriatingly illusive and unforgettable, contrary to the one-night stand that he meant her to be." - Jenny Baum (NYPL)

"This YA novel has all three elements. High school senior Jesse Alderman, a.k.a. Sway, is a heartless survivor who will do anything for money. We should hate him, but his twisted sense of humor and smart, snide remarks make us laugh out loud at his ruthless pursuit of sex, power and money. Did the death of someone close to him really make him this cold? Is there a girl out there who can win him over?" - Maura Muller (NYPL)

"A polarizing satirical book. It helps if you've read Palahniuk before and know that whether his characters are likeable is not really a concern for him. Penny meets billionaire playboy C. Linus Maxwell and becomes the test subject of his sex toy inventions. The inventions are so successful that women lock themselves in their rooms with them and no longer come out. Chaos ensues as the men are left bereft of their womenfolk." - Jenny Baum (NYPL)

"Money is actually a huge topic in the book, not only about L. Ron Hubbard's personal finances, but the Church's actual wealth, too. And there's a surprising amount of actual sex in the book." - Nora Lyons

A NOVEL BY WALTER MOSLEY

"Debbie is determined to get out of the porn business but it won't be as easy as giving two-weeks notice." - Lynn Lobash (NYPL)

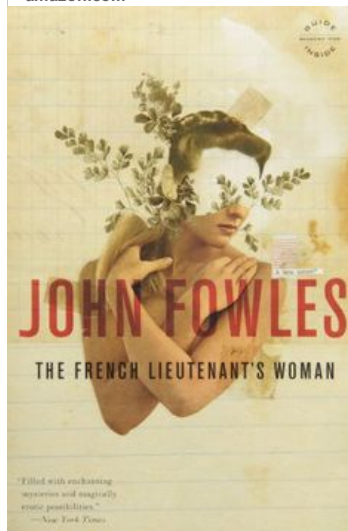

"I recently read this book for the first time and couldn't put it down. It follows two cousins from the moment they meet in young adulthood to mid-life. As you might expect, along the way they navigate some major life changes and grapple with big decisions. And yes, it's got plenty of death, sex and money." - Katie Bishop

"Tell the Wolves I'm Home is about a 14 year old girl named June who loses her uncle to the '80s AIDS epidemic and only after his death truly discovers who he was. I loved how June felt like she knew her uncle so well and then discovers she really knew very little about his life, only knew what he showed her.

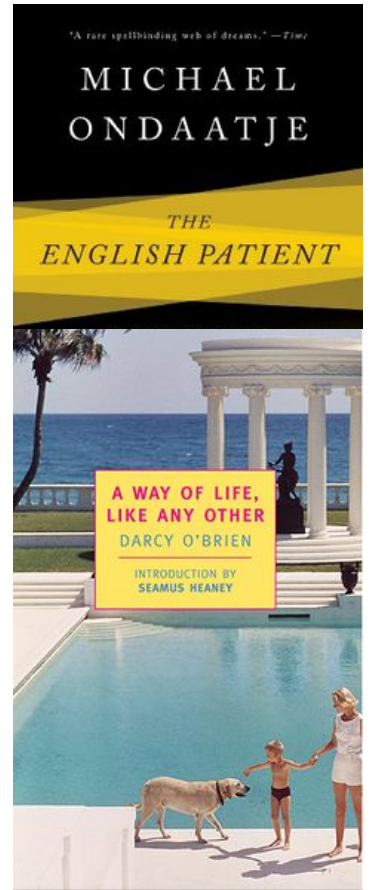

Fun Home by Alison Bechdel - Liz Blessing

Anna Karenina by Leo Tolstoy - Erica Heilman

"Roz Chast's graphic novel/memoir

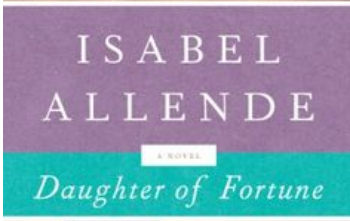

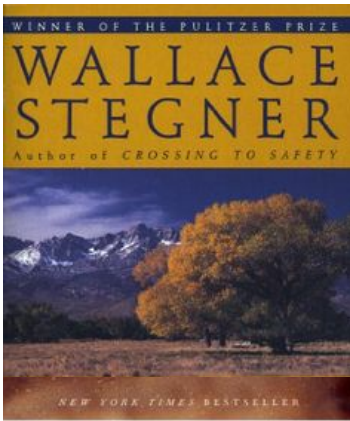

"One of my favorite books of all time -- for the gorgeousness of the writing and the frankness with which it looks at love and death -- is Heaven's Coast by Mark Doty. I don't think there's too much about money in it, but it's been too important a book to me not to nominate it for the reading list." - Emily Spiegelman
